THE Environmental Hero award went to two people: Paul Rogers from Braunton community interest company 361 Energy and five-year-old Tilly Tricker, from Bideford.

Paul was nominated for his work promoting renewable and energy-saving technology and reducing fuel poverty in the area.

Tilly was selected for taking it upon herself to clear rubbish out of a wooded area near her house using litter pickers.

Paul was taken aback by winning the award. He said: "It's great to be recognised for the work we do. I need to thank my colleagues at 361 Energy for the time and effort they have put in."

Good Neighbour

SUE Bailey, from Pilton, was named this year's Good Neighbour.

Sue provided a neighbour with childcare and a meal every Wednesday night for eight years after a personal tragedy.

She said: "I'm very flattered to be here – it's so nice to get the support. My friends were so kind to nominate me and I'm looking forward to telling my family. It feels strange to win this award when we are surrounded by so many dedicated people."

Sue was nominated by neighbour Alison Smith who said: "She has gone beyond all I could ever have expected – I can't put into words all she has done for us."
